P. G. Rejects Area Planning; Carmel Councilmen Split

At their final budget session last night the Pacific Grove City Council stood by their earlier decision: Pacific Grove will not contribute $2,100 to financing area planning.

Councilmen Ed Whitaker and Earl Grafton said that they were not opposed to area planning but were opposed to hiring professional planners. They suggested that a committee working on a voluntary basis with the assistance of the county staff could go ahead with a plan for the Monterey Peninsula.

Several members of the Area Planning Core Committees from other Peninsula cities spoke in favor of the $60,000 project, to which the county has already agreed to contribute $15,000.

Gunnar Norberg, Carmel City Councilman, who had been invited by one of the Pacific Grove councilmen to speak, said that he was opposed to setting up a planning bureaucracy which would be self-perpetuating.

Carmel council will act on whether or not they will approve Carmel's allocation of $1,500, at their budget sessions. Norberg and Councilman Allen Knight have stated that they will vote no. Councilman Tom May and Mayor John Chitwood favor Carmel participation. Councilman Jim Buffington says, "I don't know. I think we should go along with the other cities but I'll have to be shown that Carmel will get its money's worth out of it."

The area planning commission meets tonight at 8:00 o'clock in the Monterey Council Chambers.

Pacific Grove adopted a pared down budget which will still require a five and a half cent increase in city property tax, $1.90.

Special Meetings Set By Planners On C-2 Zone Fate

Planning commissioners yesterday afternoon considered possible advantages of leaving the present C-2 zone (light industry, commercial services) in new zoning plans for the city. They will meet on Monday evening, 7:30 o'clock, to study this matter and give their decision at a special planning commission meeting on Wednesday afternoon at 4:00 o'clock.

City Attorney John Morse pointed out to commissioners yesterday that there were advantages in establishing a third zone in addition to retail business C-1 and the proposed C-1-S zone to include present C-1 and C-2 uses.

He indicated that in a C-1-S perimeter zone about the central district core, parking, loading and traffic problems could arise, major grocery uses intrude in areas presently protected from such development. Also there were noise and fume hazards to be considered if certain C-2 businesses were allowed in C-1-S under conditional uses.

"Don't burden other commissions with too many conditional uses," he advised.

Co. J. C. Would Save School Dist. 17 Cents In Tax

A county junior college district would save the Carmel Unified School District taxpayers 17 cents on their tax rate.

The school board meeting tonight at 7:00 o'clock in the Carmel High School library, will receive a report from Drayton B. Nuttall of the State Department of Education, Bureau of School District Organization, which concludes:

"The data presented above clearly indicates that a county junior college district could operate, and in all probability, take care of its capital outlay needs within a .35 cent tax rate. Since the major capital outlay expenditures are already provided for, and since the establishment of Cabrillo College will likely decrease enrollments for a year or two, the county junior college district would seem quite feasible at the present time."

Carmel and Pacific Grove School

Districts, not part of any junior college district, pay a tax of 52 cents to cover tuition and capital outlay contribution to send their students to Monterey Junior College.

Unification of Monterey Junior College and the Pacific Grove and Carmel Unified school districts with Hartnell Junior College district in Salinas would put both junior colleges on a county-wide tax base, reducing Carmel and Pacific Grove tax rates 17 cents, Monterey's 21 cents.

The 17 cents saved would finance about two thirds of a $3,300,000 building program that the Carmel Unified School District must undertake if it is to keep up with anticipated enrollment increase in its elementary schools and high school (see story page 5.)

Nuttall's report verifies a study made by Dr. J. F. Ching, president of Hartnell, in February, and questioned by Monterey School Board members, who oppose the county junior college proposal and favor formation of a Monterey Peninsula Junior College, taking in the Pacific Grove and Carmel Unified School Districts. This was rejected by Carmel and Pacific Grove last year as an uneconomical solution for all districts concerned, and especially for Carmel and Pacific Grove.

The problem before the board tonight will be whether or not Carmel and Pacific Grove should annex to Hartnell independently, and if so, can they send their students to Monterey College on an exchange agreement.

Monterey board has stated that they will not accept Carmel and Pacific Grove students under these circumstances.

However, Monterey cannot refuse to accept them if the parents petition the County Superintendent of Schools and the County Superintendent rules for the parents.

The board will probably set a meeting with Pacific Grove and possibly Hartnell to discuss their mutual problem—Monterey's resistance to a county junior college arrangement that would benefit both colleges, relieve the taxpayers of unnecessarily high junior college tax, making it easier for them to finance building programs for their own high and elementary schools.

The making of textiles—one of mankind's earliest civilized accomplishments—occupies a special place in the life and imagination of Mrs. Lawrence Blinks.

To her the operations of carding, spinning, dyeing and weaving are not so much a craft as an open door to history.

Nine years ago when she was accompanying her husband, who is director of Hopkins Marine Station in Pacific Grove, on a sabbatical leave in Europe, Mrs. Blinks learned to use a loom in Sweden.

Eventually, she recalls, "I had produced all the table mats and tweed coats I could use, but I had discovered that's not all there is to weaving." About five years ago the couple was again away from home. Dr. Blinks was on loan to the government. Mrs. Blinks went to the Textile Museum in Washington, D.C. and offered her services as a weaver.

She worked at the museum for a year, making restorations of early textiles to be photographed for a book. Then for six months she did a similar stint at the Museum of Ethnology, at Cambridge. Now other institutions, including the Museum of Natural History in New York City, send her weaving samples for analysis.

The work is endlessly challenging, she says, and as a by-product she has become a student of ethnology.

In her hilltop home, in the Rancho Agujito area, Mrs. Blinks has samples of her own restorations, copies and modern adaptations of early Peruvian, Mayan (from a textile scrap found at Chichen Itza), third century Palestinian, Formosan and tablet weaving.

Tablet weaving, she explains, goes back to the Bronze Age. Crafted on a small loom on which metal or wooden tablets carry the yarn. This type weaving produces the narrow web used in belts and bands of ancient costumes. In her travels she has found tablet samples in the market at Isfahan, in modern Norway, and made her own copy of a sixth-century belt excavated from the St. John's cricket field, Cambridge, England.

Mrs. Blinks discovered early that making reproductions of weaving done before the time of the Industrial Revolution calls also for more attention to hand processing of materials. Much of the appearance of the finished weaving is accomplished in spinning and dyeing.

That's how, she says, she happens to have a collection of spinning (Continued on Page Four)

GOLDEN GATE CRICKET CLUB AT CARMEL SUNDAY AFTERNOON

Carmel's Del Monte Cricket Club will attempt to get back on the winning trail next Sunday afternoon at the expense of the Golden Gate Cricket Club out of San Francisco. Del Monte's win skein was riddled by the powerful Marin Club last Sunday as the visitors smashed out a 131-83 victory over Alex Merivale's flat-bat wielders. The Del Monte lads fell way below their average in the run scoring department in this match as the Marin bowlers retired the power hitters early in the match. Pete Lomax and Tom Schofield were the top Del Monte scorers, each shuttling over the wicket for 18 runs. Marin's Ed Young scored 28 runs for his club before retiring from action.

Sunday's match at the Carmel High School baseball diamond will find the local cricketers favored over Golden Gate since they outscored the visitors by nearly 100 runs in an earlier match at Tilden Park in Berkeley.

PLAYOFFS SET FOR DISTRICT NINE LITTLE LEAGUE TOURNAMENT

Carmel's cozy Little League Park has been chosen for the site of the 1959 District Championships which will be contested on Saturday, August 8 and Saturday, August 15. There are four areas involved in the district playoffs with teams representing King City, Soledad, Hollister, Gilroy, Salinas, Carmel Valley, and Carmel. Carmel and Carmel Valley are in Area Three and the playoff between the San Carlos Realty and the winner of the Carmel Valley Little League will take place on Saturday, August 1.

On Saturday, August 8, the 3:00 o'clock game will be between the winner of the Hollister-Gilroy area and the winner of the Carmel-Carmel Valley area. The 5:00 o'clock game on the same day will match the winner of the Salinas area with the winner of the King City-Soledad area.

August 15 finals will match the losers in a 3:00 o'clock consolation game and the winners in a 5:00 o'clock championship tussle. Both the semi-finals and finals will be played at the Carmel Little League Park. Following the final game, a testimonial dinner will be held at the Carmel American Legion Hall. This dinner is scheduled for one hour after the final game and will include players, managers, and coaches of all four participating teams plus the umpires of the semi-final and final games. The aforementioned will be guests of the Carmel Little League but for fans who wish to attend the dinner there will be a reasonable fee. The dinner is being prepared by mothers of the Carmel Little League players and the hall is being donated by the Carmel American Legion.

YOUTH CENTER TAKES LEAD IN MONTEREY SOFTBALL PLAY

Carmel Youth Center's entry in the Monterey Socko B-League zoomed to first place in the standings as it edged the Monterey DeMolay, 6 to 5, in a recent game at Monterey's Jacks Park. Director Jack Giles has his teen-age softballers going in top form at the present time and figures they can win the pennant in the B-League chase. In the DeMolay win, the Montezero brothers swung the big bats to give Carmel's popular play spot the win.

Tomorrow night at Monterey's Jacks Park, the Youth Center B-League squad will tangle with the Monterey Elks in a 7:00 o'clock game. Monday's softball action finds the YC A-League team squaring off against the Monterey Has Beens at 7:00 o'clock.

A new sport has been added to the Youth Center bill of fare and has been enthusiastically received by boys and girls alike. Each Tuesday evening, a Boat Jamboree is held at the El Estero Lake in Monterey.

Bach Festival Reviews

(Continued from Page One) greatest of Bach's many compositions in this form. This ended in a double-fugued grand finale, and was followed by Five Chorale Preludes from Eighteen Great Chorales. These were shorter, characteristic pieces which, with the Prelude and Fugue are among Bach's last compositions. A Concerto by Handel in four movements with the Festival String orchestra was an example of those used by Handel during intermissions. This, as well as the Sinfonia from Cantata No. 35 for organ and strings, conducted by Sandor Salgo, produced interesting tonal effects. The scholarly organ playing of Altman was evident throughout, and his program Thursday will be heard with interest, added to it being a rare opportunity to inspect his copy of two Handel fugues, which, after consultation with the British Museum, has proved to be one of the only two original copies to exist of the publication in London in 1735.

TUESDAY EVENING

Bach's contemporaries included the progressively cultured King Frederick the great, who, in Potsdam, welcomed a longed-for visit by Bach. At the Court's private concerts, Frederick performed and experimented with compositions, particularly those for the flute. His Concerto No. 3 in C major for flute and strings was given Tuesday with Raymond Fabrizio, soloist, and proved an attractive piece of thorough musicianship. Of its three brilliant movements the Grave contained much feeling, and Fabrizio scored a triumph with his excellent playing. A good Sinfonia by William Frederick Bach, eldest son of Johann Sebastian Bach, who accompanied his father to Potsdam, opened this program. As another contemporary composition, Telemann's Concerto for Viola and Strings enlisted Milton Thomas as soloist. Thomas' playing reflected the experience this soloist-conductor of Los Angeles has had and the audience honored his performance with many recalls. The rest of this varied program presented Bach's Solo Cantata No. 51 with charming soprano Marie Gibson and trumpeter Charles Duval in the solo parts. Randolph Hokanson then played Bach's Concerto for Piano and String Orchestra in G minor. His playing scored a triumph with its clear-cut rhythmic flow. With all these highlights, it yet remained for The Musical Offering, a Ricercar in six parts on a theme given by King Frederick to Bach, to crown the concert. There was so much enthusiasm from the audience that Conductor Salgo repeated its interesting theme that builds up from a single viola introduction through second violin, cello, and first violin to basses and full string orchestra, and a climax that brought forth all the best qualities in string playing. The small Festival Orchestra never sounded better, directed as they are by an enthusiast whose balanced accompanying of the soloists completed an outstanding evening for all concerned.

Wednesday morning's lecture and the rest of the Bach Festival programs will be reviewed in next issue of the Pine Cone.

A week ago today Jim Bannerman arrived in Long Beach aboard the heavy cruiser USS Los Angeles after a three-month tour of duty with the U. S. Seventh Fleet in the Western Pacific. During this time Jim visited Japan, Hawaii and Hong Kong. In Shimoda the Los Angeles participated in the Black Ship Festival commemorating the visit of Commodore Matthew Perry and the opening of Japan to Western trade. At Nagoya, Japan, the vessel was visited by 30,000 persons during an Open House.

In Long Beach to greet him when he docked were Jim's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James C. Bannerman and his sister, Arline. They lunched aboard the Los Angeles before driving Jim home to Carmel the next day. Tuesday Jim returned to his ship. He will be released from two years' active duty on August 5 and plans to enter the University of Arizona.

Textiles An Open Door To History For Mrs. Blinks

Her friend Keith Evans shears the sheep, Mrs. Blinks spins the wool, speaks knowledgeably of Corriedale, Marino and Cheviot, and adds, "The sheep are doubly useful. With 16 acres of grazing land, you have to do something about the fire hazard."

In her garden she grows woad, weld and madder, the vegetable dyes of British history, providing blue, yellow and red respectively.

But these plants, she hurries to explain, are in her garden for exemplary purposes only. "I just can't go in for fermenting woad. There simply aren't enough hours in the day."

Still she prefers good vegetable dyes over those produced by test tube. "A friend told me the differences are about the same as those between good Bourbon and ethyl alcohol."

"Dyeing in the fleece is best," she advises, "but the natural oil has to be removed first, and then put back in before carding, so it's a shorter process to dye the yarn after spinning."

For spinning, Mrs. Blinks has models of both the "walking wheel" and the Brunswick wheel. With the former the operator spins the wheel manually and then walks backward as the fiber twists. The Brunswick is the small wheel, treadle-operated, with a self-winding reel for the yarn, much faster.

Although she strives for durability along with craftsmanship in what she produces, Mrs. Blinks admits there is no perfect fabric. Wool rots, linen fades, cotton rots and fades.

She is currently giving a fair trial to some of the chemically produced fibers for use in upholstery and drapery. Her luck has been both good and bad in her series of experimentation, but her sympathies are plainly with the pioneer woman who spun and wove for beauty and utility, and had it all to do over when the clothing and furnishings wore threadbare.

Mrs. Blinks, who has been a Peninsulite since the early thirties and a resident of Jacks Peak since 1944, is the mother of Dr. John Blinks, who is on the teaching staff of Harvard Medical School.

Although she has plenty to keep her occupied, Mrs. Blinks welcomes hearing from fellow-aficionados for purposes of exchanging lore and know-how.

Special Meetings Set By Planners On C-2 Zone Fate

Then it occurred to Mrs. Joselyn that the C-2 zone might be left in zoning plans "to put what we don't want there."

Referring to the council's apparent desire to retain C-2, she remarked, "it's too filled up, but perhaps we should keep it," and thought light industry and commercial service businesses might be established in C-2 in spite of high property values.

"A dying C-2 zone would be legal," said Mr. Keeble pondering control of undesirable businesses by only allowing them in an already highly developed area, as brought out by Mrs. Josselyn.

Commissioner Jessie MacGregor, at the start of the discussion, turned commissioners' attention to retention of C-2 zone by suggesting a third zone in addition to C-1 and C-1-S. She reiterated her stand of last week that she wanted to see no C-2 uses in proposed C-1-S south of Ocean avenue and asked if this area might not be made a third restricted zone. She said she did not favor keeping C-2 zone except for such uses as lumber and building materials yards.

Commissioner Lee Gottfried thought the present C-2 zone, "Useless, a mark on the map."

Commissioner Hugh Smith favored retaining C-1-S. He stated that the law of supply and demand would hold sway in relation to establishing businesses in C-1-S where they were not practical. Use permits could be the control.

All commissioners recognized the urgency of sending an answer to the council concerning that body's request that the commission reconsider eliminating C-2 zone. They wished to have the thoughts on C-2 of Commissioner Herbert Blanks, absent from their last two sessions.

Chairman Wilcox decided to have the special study session and meeting.

In their regular session, prior to adjourning for C-2 study, commissioners allowed Leslie C. Fenton to eliminate a planting strip in front of the proposed I. Magnin store on Ocean avenue at Junipero street and enlarge the site area including Magnin's, a five-store building, and the proposed Bank of America building, at the Carmel Plaza site. They approved the six by 13 feet size of Magnin's display windows, two on Ocean, two on Junipero.

Commissioners decided to approve the color scheme of the Schultz motel but disapproved of proposed screen for the city building north of the pool at this site. They gave a time extension of 90 days for a medical building at the request of Burde, Shaw and Kearns; allowed Robert Little to add a balcony on the front of Carmel Lodge.

Tricia Beattie Enchanting Ondine, Many Other Standouts In Cast Of Production At The Forest Theater

BY VIRGINIA SHAW

The long-anticipated West Coast premiere of Jean Giraudoux' Ondine is an event commensurate with the golden jubilee of the Forest Theater; and there are few stages on which this charming fantasy could be more beautifully or imaginatively presented.

Meeting the demands of an extraordinarily elaborate and many-sided play, producer Cole Weston and director Benjamin Zemach have created a production which is richly embellished by youth and beauty, nature and art.

Giraudoux' treatment of the legendary romance between an other-worldly water nymph and a courtly knight has a delicate, spellbinding beauty, though he occasionally taxes the illusion rather heavily with muzzy metaphysics and wordy moralizing. But if the intellectual content of the play is somewhat ambiguous, its visual and dramatic appeal is unquestionable.

The stars of the current production could hardly be more happily chosen. Tricia Beattie is completely enchanting as the Ondine: fey and graceful, willful and touching, the character she creates is as fluid as water itself. Tall, handsome Errol Allan gives a robust yet sensitive portrayal as the worldly knight, Hans. He and Miss Beattie compliment each other in poise and acting ability as well as in appearance.

Paralleling the achievement of these comely and talented performers is the magic wrought by Marline von Ruhs and Hazel McClellan in mounting the production. Working with and around the natural features of the outdoor stage, Miss von Ruhs has created an imaginative, flexible and altogether lovely setting for Ondine's three scenes, while Miss McClellan's rich Medieval costuming is a marvel of color and design.

The cast is a large one, and on the whole commendable. Among its standouts are Joseph J. Joseph in a broadly entertaining performance as the finicky Lord Chamberlain; Helen Weston's poise and polish as the "dark princess" Bertha; and Russel Eddy in a somewhat bewildering split-personality role as a wise ancient, a glittering magician and a philosophical fisherman. John Gunnels gives warmth and dignity to the role of the King, and Don Minor and Bob Weitzel make the most of the roles of two judges. Priscilla Peabody, Zenia Lisanevitch and Renee Wurzmann foot it about gracefully as a trio of teasing water sprites.

Others contributing to the performance are William Fitzhugh, Jr., and Doris Shirek as an elderly fisherman and his wife; Linda Lyon as a Cassandra-like kitchen maid; Rick Beck-Meyer in two small but pungent portrayals as a theatrical impresario and a fisherman; and John Chance as a poet-courier. Filling minor but picturesque roles are Didi Dinkin and Linda Lyon as court beauties, Bob Weitzel as a trainer of seals, Waldtraut F. Weitzer as Venus, Ilene Morton as Salammbo, Jim Gullidge as an executioner, Jerry Mays as a clerk, and Amiee Zemach and Christopher Fitzhugh as pages.

Manipulating this sizeable cast, and keeping Ondine moving smoothly and swiftly on its several levels both of stage and of script—as sophisticated fairy-tale, psychodrama or modern morality play, however one sees it—is no mean task, and director Zemach handles it all quite skillfully, assisted by stage manager Jack James. The complicated lighting and sound effects are capably managed by Ted Weston and by Axel Duwe and Ray Fabrizio, respectively.

All involved in the production of Ondine—and numerous others connected with it only indirectly—have contributed much time, effort and thought to the production, and have helped to make it a theatrical event of which Carmel can be proud. And in obtaining the premiere rights to Ondine, Cole Weston has provided the Forest Theater with still another "first" in its distinguished fifty years.

The second and final week for Ondine will end Sunday night, with performances each evening at 8:30 o'clock. Bundle up, take the blanket and flashlight, and get to the Forest Theater while this treat is here to be enjoyed.

FROM A LIBRARIAN'S NOTEBOOK

Ruth Galvin Thornburg, Librarian

People with old books are constantly coming into the library with questions as to where and how old books are sold and how much they are worth. These are hard questions to answer. The library cannot afford to buy American Book Prices Current, which is, as you know, the records of sales and prices of rare books in this country. With a thing like that it does little good to have one issue, you need several years of it to be able to search out a title. And in selling such old books you often have to find a collector who is interested in the special field in which your book is concerned. So it's a hard thing to answer such seekers. But we have a new book which might help some of them. The author is Van Allen Bradley who is Literary Editor of the Chicago Daily News. The title of the book is Gold in Your Attic, and it is all about rare books and their markets. The last section of the book contains a list of certain rare books and the prices they brought. Interesting to you?

Osbert Lancaster has a sly poke or two at the domestic architecture of all ages in his book Here, Of All Places. A page of text to a page of drawing is his formula and it is a good one. Here you will find the homes of your friends, if not of yourself.

It may be that the idea of making your own wine is treasonous in California, but if you care to take the chance, we have the book for you. Amateur Wine Making is the title, and it was written by S. M. Tritton. One chapter has a list of do's and don'ts for winemakers concluding with this valuable hint, "Don't despair, even poor wines improve on maturing. Just like people!"

Two books with a setting in India are Tales of Ancient India by Van Buitenen and My Heart Has Seventeen Rooms by Bartholomew. Actually Van Buitenen was the translator of the book of folk tales and they are a charming collection.

The second book was written by the wife of an engineer who went to the Punjab as an advisor on the building of the Bhakra Dam. The seventeen rooms are those of an Indian hospital where Mrs. Bartholomew spent many hours daily working with the native doctors and nurses. During her two and a half years in India she learned a great deal about the people and their ways.

The man who wrote The Flower Drum Song, C. Y. Lee, was for a time modern secretary to the Sawbwa of Mangshih. The account of his years with the Sawbwa are the substance of his new book The Sawbwa and the Secretary. Mangshih is on the China-Burma border.

There are several new novels and some mysteries on our this week's list. Something for everyone is still our motto.

Nancie Nielsen Sunday Bride

Bouquets of white gladioli and carnations were placed on the candlelit altar of All Saints' Episcopal Church on Sunday when Nancie Hall Nielsen was married to Mervin Ray Sutton by the Reverend David Hill. Sprays of the same flowers, tied with white satin ribbons, marked the ends of the pews occupied by the bride's and groom's families. Robert Forbes, church organist, played while the guests assembled for the 3:00 o'clock ceremony during which the afternoon sun brightened the stained glass chancel window above the bridal party.

Nancie was given in marriage by her father, Walter Nielsen. Her white Chantilly lace gown had long sleeves which joined the fitted bodice to form a square neckline in front, dipping to a vee in back. The floor-length bouffant skirt billowed into a small train below a veed waistline in back. A tiny pearl and rhinestone crown held her shoulder-length net veil in place and she carried a bouquet of white rosebuds centered with a white orchid.

Connie Nielsen was her sister's maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Sue Bestor, Mary Angier and the bride's younger sister, Penny Nielsen. They wore similar dresses of forget-me-not blue nylon organdy. The fitted bodices with all-over white embroidery matched the flat bows which marked back waistlines of the full flowing skirts. Circle-face veils of blue net fell from their braided circlet head-dresses of the same net trimmed with pearls. The maid of honor's bouquet was a nosegay of white rosebuds and carnations while those of the bridesmaids were crescent arrangements of white carnations.

The groom's small niece, Deborah Jelisko, was flowergirl in a dress, matching the bridesmaids' in color, but with a short pleated skirt. Her headdress was the same as those of the other attendants and she carried a white basket filled with white roses and carnations.

Dinny Sutton, the groom's cousin, was ringbearer.

Harry Baxter was best man for the groom and ushers were the bride's brother, Greg Nielsen, Randy Houghtelling and David Gray.

Mrs. Nielsen attended her daughter's marriage in a beige sheath dress with a bow defining the empire waistline in front. Her feather cloche and her shoes matched the dress and her corsage was a white orchid.

Mrs. Ray Sutton, the groom's mother, wore a deep turquoise lace sheath dress, a small white feather hat and a white orchid corsage.

The reception following the wedding was held at the home of the bride's parents where the bridal party greeted the guests on the front lawn. Bouquets of white flowers decorated the living and dining rooms of the house with rosebuds and maiden hair fern.

circling the four-tiered wedding cake on the dining table.

After the bride and groom had cut their cake and been toasted in champagne, Nancie changed to a white pique dress, matching pique coat, sailor hat, gloves and shoes. She and Mervin will honeymoon for a week in Los Angeles and another week in the Sierra then return to Carmel to live.

Nancie was born in Carmel and graduated from the Carmel schools in 1957 before taking a modelling course at the Powers School in San Francisco.

Mervin graduated from Carmel High School in 1956, then spent two years in the Navy. He returned to attend Monterey Peninsula College last year and enters his sophomore year at MPC in September.

Moira Colleen Fifth Child

Lieutenant Commander and Mrs. Rue M. White's fifth child, Moira Colleen, who was born at Fort Ord Hospital on June 28, will have less than a month to call Carmel her home. The White's have been living in Carmel for two and a half years. Lieut. Commander White was an instructor in the Line School at the Naval Postgraduate School. This was their second tour of duty here. Five years ago Lieut. Commander White was a Line School student and brought his family to live here at that time also.

Moira's birth weight was eight pounds, thirteen ounces. Her sister Maureen is ten years old. Her brothers are J. W., eight and a half; Shaun, six; and David, five.

Bach Festival Parties

Soloists, choristers, orchestra players, board members and organization personnel of the Bach Festival are being entertained this week following festival performances and rehearsals.

Monday evening the Arts and Humanities Council of the Monterey Peninsula gave a reception at the Carmel Art Association Gallery for participants following the opening Festival concert.

Tuesday evening Miss Dene Denny, Festival founder, with Festival conductor Sandor Salgo and Mrs. Salgo, director of the chorale, gave their annual party for Bach personnel at the Carmel Woman's Club.

Yesterday Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Klene entertained Bach soloists and performers at a buffet luncheon at their Carmel Valley home. In the evening Dr. and Mrs. Walter Lehmann gave two buffet dinners for Festival musicians, one before the evening rehearsal at 7:00 o'clock, another at 10:00 o'clock following rehearsal.

This evening Mr. and Mrs. Fritz Wurzmann will be host and hostess at a reception for Festival soloists and musicians.

Tomorrow and Saturday evenings no large parties are planned for those taking part in the Bach Festival. There will be small gatherings, however, in many Carmel homes for Festival participants and out-of-town and local members of the Festival audiences.

Masonic Special Meeting

Carmel Lodge, F. and A. M. 780 will have a special meeting Monday night at Masonic hall on Lincoln Street near Seventh. All members and sojourners and their ladies are invited to come.

Animal performers include Prince El Kigordo's Lions, Kon-yot's Chimpanzees, the Besarion Elephants, Burger's Ken-L-Kade featuring Afghan hounds and the horses of the George Hanneford bareback riders.

Aerial sensations are provided by the Flying Alexanders, the High-Wire Coronas, Princess Tajana, Senor Cardona, the Reynoso Trio and the Aerialacrobatics.

Gymnastic and balancing skills of wide range are displayed by such troupes as the Five Amandis, the Tong Brothers, the Georgian Trio and the Ricardos.

CUCKOO RUNS TILL AUG. 1 AT CIRCLE

An accomplished young actress joins the cast of The Time of the Cuckoo this week at the Golden Bough Circle Theatre. Myrtlerose Craig takes over the role of June Yeager in the Arthur Laurents play, which has been extended from July 19 to August 1.

Miss Craig will be remembered for her performances in The Curious Savage, Ring Round the Moon, and The Beautiful People at the Golden Bough, and she has more recently returned from Hollywood, where she played leading roles both on stage and on the screen. She replaces Sandra Powers in the Circle cast, which includes Peg Miner and Valerio Giuso in much-lauded performances as an American working girl and an Italian shopkeeper.

Pine Needles ...Parent-Nursery School Picnic

Parents and friends of the Carmel Parent-Nursery Cooperative last Monday evening had a picnic on San Jose Creek Beach adjoining the nursery school on Highway 1 south of Carmel.

Sixteen sets of parents, with assorted sizes of offspring, enjoyed hot dogs, salads, desserts and other essentials of a beach party. Firewood was found on the beach and Mrs. Lester Gorn, chairman of the event, proved to be an able hot dog roaster.

The children took advantage of their surroundings, climbed rocks, played baseball, roasted marshmallows, tested the temperature of the ocean and managed to accumulate a healthy amount of dirt. Between rescuing their young ones from precarious spots, the cooperating adults got in a good deal of conversation and had an opportunity to become acquainted with the new members of the school's summer session directed by Mrs. Rosa Doner.

Participating parents were Mr. and Mrs. Peter Wangoe, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Verser, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Schumacher, Mr. and Mrs. Lester Gorn, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Ramsey, Mr. and Mrs. Nick LaSorella, Mr. and Mrs. Allan Marcus, Mr. and Mrs. John Cocker, Mr. and Mrs. Merrill Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Denn Lowrie, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Harner, Dr. and Mrs. James Gilman, Mr. and Mrs. Milton Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Price and Mrs. June Harris with their children ranging from toddlers up.

The Carmel Parent-Nursery School's regular fall semester begins in September. Any interested parent of a pre-schooler is asked to telephone either Rosa Doner, MA 4-7258 or Mrs. Donald Canham, MA 4-7990 for enrollment information. The school is a unit of the Carmel Unified School District.—Judy Ramsey
